LOCATION

The district of Eimsbüttel

Covering 7% of the municipality, Eimsbüttel is the smallest of Hamburg's districts. With around 264,000 residents – representing 15% of Hamburg's total population – it is also the most densely populated district. While Eimsbüttel's inner-city quarters in particular are among the most sought-after residential areas, they are also popular locations for innovative companies from the services sector and the creative industries – which is largely due to their excellent locational features and their rich choice of attractive leisure facilities. Among new, young companies there is a growing demand for working environments that are characterised by a mix of different features, social openness, public spaces, as well as urban architecture and urban culture. Eimsbüttel is also home to Hamburg's largest university with over 42,000 students and numerous institutes and research facilities.

Major companies based in Eimsbüttel include Beiersdorf AG, the Signal Iduna Group, the HanseMerkur Insurance Group, VELUX Deutschland GmbH, Bode Chemie GmbH, and Norddeutscher Rundfunk (NDR). The "Meistermeile", Northern Germany's first multi-storey, inner-city estate for skilled tradesman's businesses is an innovative offer for Hamburg-based craft enterprises as it provides centrally located commercial spaces in spite of increasing density. At the "Meistermeile", small and medium-sized enterprises in particular can find a place in close proximity to their customers.

The outer quarters of Eimsbüttel are largely characterised by more land-intensive enterprises, such as manufacturing and logistics companies, who benefit from excellent transport connections as well as the close proximity to Hamburg Airport.

The location in more detail

The Schnelsen West commercial area is located in the north of the Eimsbüttel district. It is situated in the quarter of the same name, between Kulemannstieg, Holsteiner Chaussee, Flagentwiet and Pinneberger Strasse. The area is mainly home to craft businesses and small enterprises, as well as logistics businesses and wholesalers.

The commercial area provides excellent access to the regional transport system. The Holsteiner Chaussee (B4) is directly accessible via Pinneberger Strasse and Flagentwiet, and the A7 motorway (Hamburg-Schnelsen) is about 2 km away.

Within a radius of about 500 m there are several bus stops, and the AKN train station of Schnelsen connects the area to Hamburg's local public transport network. As AKN trains are intended to be converted into rapid railway trains, connectivity of the location will be even better in the near future.
